Weeks eight and nine, the last two of a regular legislative session, are always frenzied and unpredictable. Week eight begins today. Conference budget negotiators have been named and the conference process has begun (see related story). The budget must be completed and on each member's desk no later than next Tuesday, which means they have eight days to wrap up the only bill they are required to pass. This task has been made easier this year because of a surplus of available money.

During the early part of this week, appropriations committees will meet one last time. After that, the House and Senate Committee process will shut down, which will restrict what might reach the respective floors for final passage. Several SUS bills are still in play, including University Governance, financial assistance, and the naming bills (see Spotlight on Bills). This is also the time during a session when “trains”—amendments that are tacked on to bills that have already moved out of a committee and are headed towards the floor—are attempted.

Representative Dennis Baxley, (R-Ocala, FSU Alum) met with the State University Presidents last week to discuss his “academic freedom” legislation. While Rep. Baxley conceded that his bill was probably dead this session, he asked each president to review their student/faculty grievance policies and report back to him next fall with any modifications that might be made.

A very successful, albeit modified FSU Day at the Capitol pleased the Capitol crowd last Wednesday. Head baseball coach Mike Martin began the House session with a prayer, and women’s basketball head coach Sue Semrau did the same in the Senate. In addition, FSU baseball player Shane Robinson was honored on the House floor for his recent hitting streak, the FSU pep band provided musical entertainment, and our legislative alumni, including House Speaker Allan Bense were honored. All of these activities made for some wonderful garnet-and-gold moments.

You can catch the floor action live, as well as conference negotiations, and the last of the committee process, on the Florida Channel, 24 hours a day, everyday, on local cable channel 4. And, as always, please feel free to contact me with comments or concerns you may have. I can be reached at (850) 644-4453 or by e-mail at kdaly@govrel.fsu.edu.

Budget Update

Conference, the process by which House and Senate budget negotiators hammer out the differences in their respective budgets, is in full swing. Last Friday, the Senate made an offer to the House, then broke for the Passover weekend.

The Senate offered more money for university enrollment-growth funding, bringing the total of new money to just under $50 million. They also offered an additional $8.1 million in non-recurring funds for the Major Gifts program. The House has $9 million in non-recurring enhancements funds in FSU’s base budget. The Senate has instead offered $2.52 million in non-recurring funds. Tuition policies, salaries, PECO and proviso have not yet been discussed publicly.

The House will have the opportunity to counter-offer this afternoon.
